Students are expected to promote and maintain their own optimal level of health. They must assume responsibility for protecting themselves and others from hazards such as infection and radiation. A student's ill health is detrimental to patients and others.

Students may not participate if

- they have a communicable disease.
- there is likelihood of transmission (such as fever, open lesions or weeping dermatitis, skin infection, eye infection, or acute respiratory infection).

Clinical/fieldwork/practicum/professional practice experience absences may result in course failure. If the student is absent for two consecutive clinical/fieldwork/practicum/professional practice experience days due to illness, the student may be asked to provide a physician's written statement that the student's health is acceptable to return.
